The Future of Health Professional Education

This topic will focus on recent shifts in the health and health care industry in terms of their implications for health professional education and workforce learning.

We plan to discuss opportunities for new platforms of communication and learning, continuous education of the health workforce, opportunities for team-based care and other types of collaborations. This session intends to explore the implications that shifts in health, policy, and the health care industry could have on health professional education and workforce learning, identifies learning platforms that could facilitate effective knowledge transfer with improved quality and efficiency, and discusses opportunities for building a global health workforce that understands the role of culture and health literacy in perceptions and approaches to health and disease.

Linked to this topic, Professor Béla Merkely, Rector of Semmelweis University Budapest has invited his colleagues to participate in a European university rector's meeting to discuss the challenges of medical and health education, doctor-nurse competencies, and more. On the closing day of the congress, the rectors are going to present their findings to the European experts participating in the congress.
